

CONTRIBUTORS

Michael Augros earned his doctorate in philosophy at Boston College in 1995, and has been teaching ever since. He is the published author of several scholarly articles, and is currently a tenured member of the faculty at Thomas Aquinas College in Santa Paula, California.

Giuseppe Butera is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Providence College. A native of Toronto and a graduate of the University of Toronto, he earned his doctorate in Philosophy from The Catholic University of America in 2001. Before coming to Providence College, he held postdoctoral fellowships at the University of Notre Dame and The Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies. His research interests include St. Thomas Aquinas's virtue ethics, natural law theory, and philosophical psychology. He has published in journals such as Mediaeval Studies, The Thomist, and Philosophy, Psychiatry, and Psychology.

John J. Conley, S.J., is the Francis J. Knott Professor of Philosophy at Loyola University, Maryland. He specializes in ethics, aesthetics, and early modern philosophy. Major books include Adoration and Annihilation: The Convent Philosophy of Port-Royal (University of Notre Dame Press, 2009), Madame de Maintenon: Dialogues and Addresses (University of Chicago Press, 2004), Jacqueline Pascal: A Rule for Children (University of Chicago Press, 2003), and The Suspicion of Virtue: Women Philosophers in Neoclassical France (Cornell University Press, 2002).

Travis Dumsday received his doctorate from the University of Calgary in 2010. Currently a post-doctoral fellow at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, he works chiefly in analytic philosophy of science, philosophy of religion, and the mediaeval period.

Elinor Gardner, O.P., is a member of the Dominican Sisters of Saint Cecilia of Nashville, Tennessee. She received her Ph.D. in Philosophy from Boston College in 2009, writing on "Saint Thomas Aquinas on the Death Penalty." She has taught at Aquinas College in Nashville, and currently teaches at The Catholic University of America.

Marie I. George received her Ph.D. in philosophy from Laval University in 1987, and is currently Professor of Philosophy at St. John's University, New York. An Aristotelian-Thomist, her interests lie primarily in the areas of natural philosophy and philosophy of science. She has received several awards from the John Templeton foundation for her work in science and religion, and in 2007 was co-recipient of a grant from the Center for Theology and the Natural Sciences (CTNS) for an interdisciplinary project entitled, "The Evolution of Sympathy and Morality." She has authored over 50 peer-reviewed articles and two books: Christianity and Extraterrestrials? A Catholic Perspective (2005), and Stewardship of Creation (2009). She also co-edited the AMA volume, Faith, Scholarship, and Culture in the 21st Century (2002). She is currently working on Aquinas's "Fifth Way," and also on a variety of questions concerning living things (self-motion, consciousness, evolution, etc.).

James G. Hanink is Professor of Philosophy at Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles, California, where he has taught for 35 years. His academic interests and publications center on personalist metaphysics, realist epistemology, natural law ethics, and political philosophy. He is active in University Faculty for Life and, with his wife Elizabeth, in pro-life advocacy work. They have five children and four grandchildren.

Andrew Jaspers is a recent lecturer and resident instructor in philosophy and theology at Creighton University in Omaha, Nebraska. He studied philosophy and theology at Marquette University and Fordham University, and specialized in Thomistic ethics with Fr. Joseph Koterski, S.J. He is currently a seminarian of the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and is in divinity and theology studies at St. Paul Seminary of the University of St. Thomas in St. Paul, Minnesota. He is a ministry fellow of the Fund for Theological Education. He is also a review editor for the Linacre Quarterly and edits the daily reflections for the Magis Center for Catholic Spirituality. He has contributed articles to the New Catholic Encyclopedia, Linacre Quarterly, and to volumes sponsored by the American Catholic Philosophical Association, University Faculty for Life, and the American Maritain Association.

Gregory J. Kerr is Associate Professor of Philosophy at DeSales University in Center Valley, Pennsylvania. He received his B.A. and

M.A. in philosophy from Boston College and his Ph.D. from Fordham University, where he wrote his dissertation on Maritain's Receptive Intuition and the Benefits of Art. He is a former editor of the Maritain Notebook, the official newsletter of the American Maritain Association. He has published articles on Maritain's views on aesthetics, epistemology, ethics, love, and education in volumes in the American Maritain Association series. He has a special interest in exploring the very different ways humans know. He is married to Cindy and they have four sons.

Peter Karl Koritansky is an Assistant Professor of History, Philosophy, and Religious Studies at The University of Prince Edward Island. He is author of Thomas Aquinas and the Philosophy of Punishment (The Catholic University of America Press, 2011) as well as The Philosophy of Punishment and the History of Political Thought (The University of Missouri Press, 2011). He has taught at Walsh University in North Canton, Ohio, and the Ateneo Pontificio Regina Apostolorum in Rome, Italy. He currently lives with his wife and three children in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

Matthew S. Pugh is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Providence College. He is co-editor, along with Craig Paterson, of Analytical Thomism: Traditions in Dialogue, and is the author of numerous articles in books and journals on the philosophies of Thomas Aquinas, Jacques Maritain, and Neo-Thomism. He is currently working on a book project that philosophically reassesses Aquinas's metaphysics of esse in light of concerns in contemporary analytic and continental philosophy.

Mario Ramos-Reyes received a J.D. and Licentiate in Philosophy from Catholic University of Paraguay; an M.A. in Philosophy from Holy Apostle College in Connecticut; an M.T.S. from Ave Maria University; and a Ph.D. in Intellectual History from the University of Kansas. He has published a number of articles on Latin American philosophy, as well as Philosophy and Democratic Thought (1998); Ethics and Philosophy (2005); and The Ideal of a Republic as an Ethical Task (2009). He holds the post of Emeritus Consul to the State of Kansas, and is Chair of the Department of Philosophy at the School of Social Sciences, at Kansas City College. He is also an Adjunct Professor of Social Ethics and Church History at the Bishop Helmsing Institute, Diocese of Kansas City-St. Joseph, Missouri. He is also the Executive Director of the Center for the Study of Culture, Education and Development, an initiative for the Study of Catholic Social Teaching.

Anthony Rizzi, Director of the Institute for Advanced Physics, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, gained recognition in theoretical physics by solving an 80-year old problem in Einstein's general theory of relativity. He has physics degrees from MIT and Princeton University, was the senior scientist for California Institute of Technology's Laser Interferometer Gravitational-wave Observatory (LIGO), and taught graduate physics at Louisiana State University. As Staff Physicist for Martin Marietta, his work included projects for the Manned Mars Craft and the Mars Observer, earning him special recognition, including a Martin Marietta New Technology Award. He is the author of The Science Before Science: A Guide to Thinking in the 21st Century. In addition to his professional articles, he has authored two textbooks: Physics for Realists: Mechanics and Physics for Realists: Electricity and Magnetism.

Jennifer Rosato specializes in twentieth century French philosophy and has been lately concerned with the possibility of a phenomenological ethics. Her recent work includes an essay on the theme of maternity in Levinas' Otherwise than Being, forthcoming in Hypatia. She currently teaches at The College of Saint Mary Magdalen in Warner, New Hampshire.

John G. Trapani, Jr., is a Professor of Philosophy at Walsh University in North Canton, Ohio. During his 37 years at the university, he has served as Chair of the Philosophy Department and Humanities Division. In addition, he is also the Founder and Director of the university's annual Philosophy-Theology Symposium, now in its 36th year. The current President of the American Maritain Association, John has written extensively on Maritain's philosophy and his book, Poetry, Beauty, and Contemplation: The Complete Aesthetics of Jacques Maritain, was published by Catholic University of America Press in February of 2011. In the AMA book series, he was the editor of Truth Matters (2004). John is also a professional musician and the leader of the 17-piece John Trapani Big Band, founded in 1977.

Nikolaj Zunic is Associate Professor of Philosophy at St. Jerome's University in Waterloo, Ontario, Canada. He earned his B.A. at the University of Toronto and his M.A. and Ph.D at the Catholic University of Leuven (Louvain), Belgium. His philosophical interests include philosophical anthropology, particularly the tradition of Christian personalism, the philosophy of religion, and metaphysics. He has published articles in Maritain Studies, American Catholic Philosophical Quarterly, and The Heythrop Journal. He lives in Kitchener, Ontario, with his wife Erin and their five children.